Julie Dunn has worked in a range of educational contexts, from preschools to universities, but in all of these settings her focus has been on developing opportunities for learners to strengthen the power of their imaginations. Currently she is a senior lecturer at Griffith University, Brisbane where she works with undergraduate and post-graduate education and applied theatre students. Julie’s research focuses on the relationship between play and drama.